

Willoughby Jubilee Allotment's Micro Museum

As we have cultivated our allotments here in Willoughby, we have found all sorts of small objects that illustrate the site's history. We are thinking of setting up a micro museum to display the artefacts we have dug up over the last few seasons. Things like devil's toenails from when the allotment site, and Willoughby, was under the sea millions of years ago, to horseshoes from working horses, to pieces of a building.

To display these objects we are applying for grants to purchase a transportable cabinet (and fittings) to display the objects, that will be easy to move about so that the exhibits can be shown around the area as well as in the village.

We also would like to hear from you if you know what the building on the site was? A pigsty? Do you remember it behind the pond? Are you interested in looking at the artefacts and sharing your knowledge of history and archaeology? Please let us know.

The questionnaire below is to provide information in support of our grant applications for the Micro Museum cabinet and to see if you would be interested in the project. Please take a few minutes to complete it for us, it will be much appreciated - just mark the relevant box on the right of each question.
