

One New Clock And One Old

Photo: Hamblin

IN this picture of the Church of St. Nicholas, Willoughby, is seen the electric clock which was installed as a memorial to those who fell in the second World War. There is in the tower a disused clock, probably of the seventeenth century, for which the weight used to be raised by capstan bars on the winding drums.